The female teams already know the positions they will compete for in THE FINAL qualification round

Yesterday morning, the female teams played to qualify for the final round, which will take place today with five matches.

In the 10:00 match at the Fernando Argüelles venue, German Sport University Cologne (DSHS) is leading Group B after beating the University of Valencia (UV), with a final score of 26-24.

At the same time, at the CTA, Aksaray University (Turkey) played against Radboud University Nijmegen (Netherlands). This match ended up with a score of 23-30 for the Dutch team. With this victory, Radboud University Nijmegen is second in its group, which makes it fight for the 3rd and the 4th place in the final.

At 12:00, at Fernando Argüelles, Ovidius University of Constanta (Romania) played against the University of Malaga (Spain). The Spanish team couldn't beat the Romanians, who won with a score of 34-29. The University of Malaga will play for the 7th and 8th positions against the University of Valencia, and Ovidius University of Constanta will compete against Oslo University for the 5th and 6th places.

At the CTA, it was the turn of the University of Aveiro (Portugal) against the

UA versus UPR

University of Primorska (Slovenia), who are last in their group. University of Aveiro showed their superiority against the Slovenian players, with a final score of 52-26 for the Portuguese team. With this victory, the Portuguese players are first in their group, so they will play for the 1st and 2nd positions against German Sport University Cologne. After their defeat, the Slovenian team will compete for the 9th and 10th positions in the ranking.

Match F18, DHS versus UV

Match F17, AKS versus RU at the CTA

Starring

Mr. José Eloy Cano

The person in charge of accommodation and marketing

If you look around and find out you're in a wonderful place where there is nothing you're missing, if you were kindly welcomed upon your arrival at the airport and you would like to thank someone, then go and talk to Eloy Cano. He is officially responsible for accommodation and marketing but, among his other tasks, he is also in charge of protocol and the arrivals in Malaga, which includes welcoming all the participants as well as taking care of their baggage with the help of six volunteers from the organization.

They have already recovered six lost pieces of baggage!

In order to carry out his work, Mr. Cano has taken into account EUSA's criteria for accommodation, highly accomplishing all the objectives for the Championship, lodging more than 400 participants in three different hotels and meeting all their needs regarding food and some special conditions such as food allergies or Halal food. An epic task to guarantee the participants' satisfaction as well as to leave the University of Malaga in the high position it deserves.
